Dear North Carolinians:

It gives me great pleasure to present the 2002 Annual Report for the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (DJJDP). The Department, which is less than three years old and is the newest cabinet agency, has made major strides building the foundation for juvenile justice in our state. Since 2000, DJJDP has worked to pull the pieces of a comprehensive juvenile justice system together, put them into place, and connect them for future success.

Our juvenile justice system is an extension of our education system where programs and facilities across the state work together to maintain public safety, fight juvenile crime, and give troubled young people an opportunity to find a path of success. DJJDP interacts with more than 100,000 youth each year. Through the Department's efforts, North Carolina's most troubled youth are getting the education they need and are being diverted away from a life of crime. One hundred Juvenile Crime Prevention Councils, made up of community leaders like yourselves, work diligently with DJJDP to ensure that each county has a juvenile crime prevention plan. Through a State-Local partnership, we are making a difference in North Carolina for our young people.

As the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention continues to put the strategic pieces in place for our youth's future, I know great things lie ahead for North Carolina. I look forward to continued work with the Department to keep North Carolina safe, to keep our youth out of trouble, and to provide treatment for those in need. Children are the Tarheel State's greatest resource and our future.

With kindest regards, I remain

Very truly yours,

Dear Friends of Juvenile Justice:

The Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention is pleased to present our Annual Report 2002: Pulling the Pieces Together; Putting the Pieces in Place; Connecting the Pieces for Success. This year's report offers statistics about the youth we serve. It brings into focus where in North Carolina the youth involved in the juvenile justice system come from, what they have done that has led to their involvement, and who they are in terms of demographic information.

As the title of this report suggests, the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention's existence has been marked by the challenge of pulling together the pieces of juvenile justice which existed in North Carolina prior to the Department's establishment in 2000. Calendar year 2002, as evidenced in this report, was characterized by a number of accomplishments reflective of the success we have achieved in putting the pieces of the system in place. The future presents the challenge of connecting the pieces for success. We are confident that we have begun to make those connections and are committed to making sure that the juvenile justice system which serves North Carolina is one that will be seamless, comprehensive, and effective.

Annual Report 2002 represents a departure from past reports. Our departmental website (www.ncdjjdp.org) now offers an outlet for communicating much more detailed information about us and about juvenile justice in North Carolina. We suggest that you visit the website for additional information or that you contact us directly. Together, we can connect for success and for the future of North Carolina.

Sincerely,

The North Carolina Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention: Annual Report 2002 Introduction

Pulling the Pieces Together: The New DJJDP

The North Carolina Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (DJJDP) was established in July, 2000, by pulling together pieces of state government that previously worked independently to address juvenile delinquency and crime. As a new department, we have the responsibility for protecting the public from juvenile crime and promoting the positive development of youth. We work to fulfill this responsibility in a number of ways. Our programs and services offer a comprehensive continuum that stretches from youth who are in schools and communities to those who are confined to DJJDP facilities. We provide programs and services that focus on early prevention as well as those that are oriented toward intervention and confinement. Our programs and services fit together to form a juvenile justice system designed to keep the public safe and reduce the occurrence of juvenile crime.

Putting the Pieces in Place: Accomplishments 2002

DJJDP's record of accomplishments in 2002 (see pages 6-9) demonstrates the progress we are making in juvenile justice in North Carolina. At both the state and local levels, we succeeded in reducing juvenile crime, enhancing public safety, providing treatment services, educating the hardest-to-reach students, implementing data-driven decision making through technology advances, and improving work performance. This annual report conveys information about the youth we served in 2002: where they come from in the state; what they have done; and who they are.

Connecting the Pieces for Success: The Challenge

We are committed to connecting all of the pieces of juvenile justice to create a seamless, comprehensive, system to meet the needs of North Carolina citizens. We strive to provide the most effective services to youth and their families at the right time in the most appropriate settings. Connecting the pieces for success is the challenge that lies ahead. DJJDP is ready to meet this challenge.

PUTTING THE PIECES TOGETHER: ACCOMPLISHMENTS 2002

Prevention

Protecting the Public and Building a Brighter Tomorrow for Our Youth

There were 55,396 admissions to community Juvenile Crime Prevention Council (JCPCs) programs, Eckerd Wilderness Camps, multipurpose juvenile homes, mentoring programs, and Support Our Students (SOS) after-school services.

All 100 JCPCs were trained in the new Juvenile Crime Prevention Community Planning Model. Using this model, the JCPCs are now able to properly assess their community's risks and needs and develop plans of action to target juvenile crime and promote delinquency prevention.

Youth who were processed in juvenile court received treatment under court supervision in a community program or in a youth development center.

Year 2002 experienced the continued reduction of admissions to our youth development centers (YDCs). Since DJJDP was established, admissions have been reduced by 32% with 605 youth admitted to a YDC in 2002, 660 in 2001, and 975 in 2000.

Public school classroom teachers reported that more than 40% of the regularly attending participants in after-school SOS programs improved their grades in English and/or Math.

Some 47% of SOS students surveyed said that they complete their homework during SOS, but don't believe they would complete it if they were not involved in SOS.

Middle school SOS participants receiving out-of-school suspensions decreased from 13% to 8% as compared to their previous year in school. SOS participants receiving in-school suspensions also dropped from 13% to 8%.

Through our Center for the Prevention of School Violence, we responded to requests for violence prevention assistance from 98 North Carolina's counties.

We partnered with Pinkerton Services, of Charlotte, NC, to provide the North Carolina Safe Schools tip line to the entire state and worked with 400 schools on the educational campaign that accompanies the tip line. Almost 700 tips have been handled by the tip line.

All NC public, charter, and private schools received "Critical Incident Response Kits" from us through the Center which also trained over 1000 schools in critical incident response. This was a collaborative project between DJJDP and the North Carolina Attorney General's Office.

Public Safety

Keeping the Public Safe from Juvenile Crime

A 2.6% decrease in juvenile crime occurred from 2001 to 2002. Some 13,664 juvenile complaints were treated with community services rather than being approved for juvenile court processing.

A new 24-bed detention center was opened in Taylorsville in Alexander County. It is centrally located for easy access by parents, law enforcement, and transportation drivers.

We improved our ability to securely transport juveniles to detention centers, court, and youth development centers by implementing a transportation plan using five vans purchased in 2001 with federal funds. The vans enable us to provide the majority of needed juvenile transportation in the state.

DJJDP completed a reconfiguration of bed space at the five YDCs to establish an accurately rated bed capacity which includes juvenile classifications and programs that are provided at each YDC.

An evaluation of SOS released in 2002 reported that adult supervision of participants was enhanced because of involvement in the program. Such supervision is critical as participants are kept "off the streets" during the "prime time for juvenile crime" (2:00 pm - 6:00 pm).

Our Youth Development Division established a "Central Office Site Team" (C.O.S.T.) Monitoring Committee. This committee shares information with staff and students, enhances program implementation, observes morale, team building and unity between staff members, audits the YDCs to ensure compliance with policies, procedures, and standards, inspects the YDCs to ensure safety, determines that the YDCs meet OSHA and safety standards, finds strengths and weaknesses at the YDCs, and helps develop plans of corrective action for weaknesses.

Treatment

Developing Youth into Law-Abiding Citizens

DJJDP opened an Assessment Center for males on the campus of Dillon YDC in Butner in Granville County and an Assessment Center for females at Samarkand YDC in Moore County. At the Centers, youth are clinically assessed so that individual treatment plans can be developed to best meet their needs.

We established clinical director and social work supervisor positions at each YDC.

We developed a holistic gender-specific substance abuse residential treatment program for adjudicated females called the HEART (Holistic Enrichment For At-Risk Teens) Program at Samarkand YDC.

The "Blended Enrichment Services Treatment" (BEST) project began June 1, 2002. BEST provides a comprehensive substance abuse and other life domain assessments of each female committed to Samarkand YDC and supports the provision of prescribed interventions and the coordination of aftercare. The BEST project provided 23 new positions.

We received $700,000 in federal funds to pilot a three-year project called "The Collaborative for Offender Re-entry Enhancement" (C.O.R.E). The pilot project seeks to fill the gaps in serious and violent juvenile offender re-entry in NC.

DJJDP, in collaboration with Dr. Mark Lipsey and Dr. James "Buddy" Howell, made progress on the Standardized Program Evaluation Protocol (SPEP) which will enable us to evaluate the effectiveness of services funded by JCPCs.

Education

Providing an Opportunity for All Students to Learn

In 2002, daily attendance in the Exceptional Students Program in the Youth Development Division averaged over 300 students.

Educational Services was awarded a grant in 2002 to focus on developing, implementing, and monitoring a program related to the transition of youth from YDCs to local schools and communities.

Through collaboration with the Buncombe County Sheriff's Department, Swannanoa YDC is DJJDP's first facility to have a School Resource Officer.

Project Connect began in earnest in 2002. This has renewed focus on education transition services for all students at YDCs. It was piloted at Jackson YDC and was funded through federal Title I funds.

In order to enhance reading skills, we established reading centers at all of our YDCs. Americorps volunteers assisted in our reading emphasis at Dobbs YDC by tutoring students and reading with them on a regular basis.

For the first time, each of our five YDC schools participated fully in the NC ABCs of Public Education accountability program. Behavior problems in school were reduced by over 80% at one school, and parental involvement more than doubled at another.

Students in YDC schools can now receive high school diplomas.

An educational technology plan was developed for the five schools in conjunction with technology experts at central office, and three schools have filtered access to the Internet. Teachers now have e-mail capability.

The DJJDP-Center's model for conflict management education was fully developed, and the enhancement of teacher licensure requirements in the area of conflict management was accomplished. A national debut of the materials took place in Washington, DC.

The DJJDP-Center facilitated a forum which brought together superintendents and juvenile justice representatives to discuss short-term suspension programs. The forum was part of DJJDP's work with the Department of Public Instruction and the Attorney General's Office on Senate Bill 71.

SOS is helping to close the gap between minority and majority students. An evaluation released in 2002 reported that minority SOS participants made significantly greater improvements than majority students in both Math and Reading.

Technology

Making Data-Driven Decisions

DJJDP completed statewide network connections to all locations using data-circuits and dial-up lines.

We are one step closer to rolling out NC-JOIN (NC Juvenile Online Information Network). This information tracking system will allow statewide data collection.

A web-based "Infraction Tracking System" was established at the YDCs. This system will enable us to track data on student infractions and behavior alerts, to generate reports on that data, and to report on outcomes of disciplinary hearings and appeals.

We completed the Juvenile Tracking System for managing youth development and detention center activities.

DJJDP's Intervention/Prevention Division developed a risk and needs data collection tool for court counselors to use to assess a youth's risks and needs. This data will help JCPCs with their community assessments.

Work Performance

Customer Service, Communication and Work Efficiency

DJJDP unveiled www.ncdjdp.org in 2002 in order to continue to educate the public about the Department. The website, designed with the customer in mind, is more than 500 pages, and contains data, local DJJDP contact information, JCPC resources and news. Each month, the Communications Office produces the web based news magazine, the DJJDP News Express. The magazine focuses on juvenile justice programs and services that are making a difference in North Carolina's communities.

Human Resources and Staff Development were combined within DJJDP and joined forces with the Communications Office to provide the Employee News Section on the Department's new website.

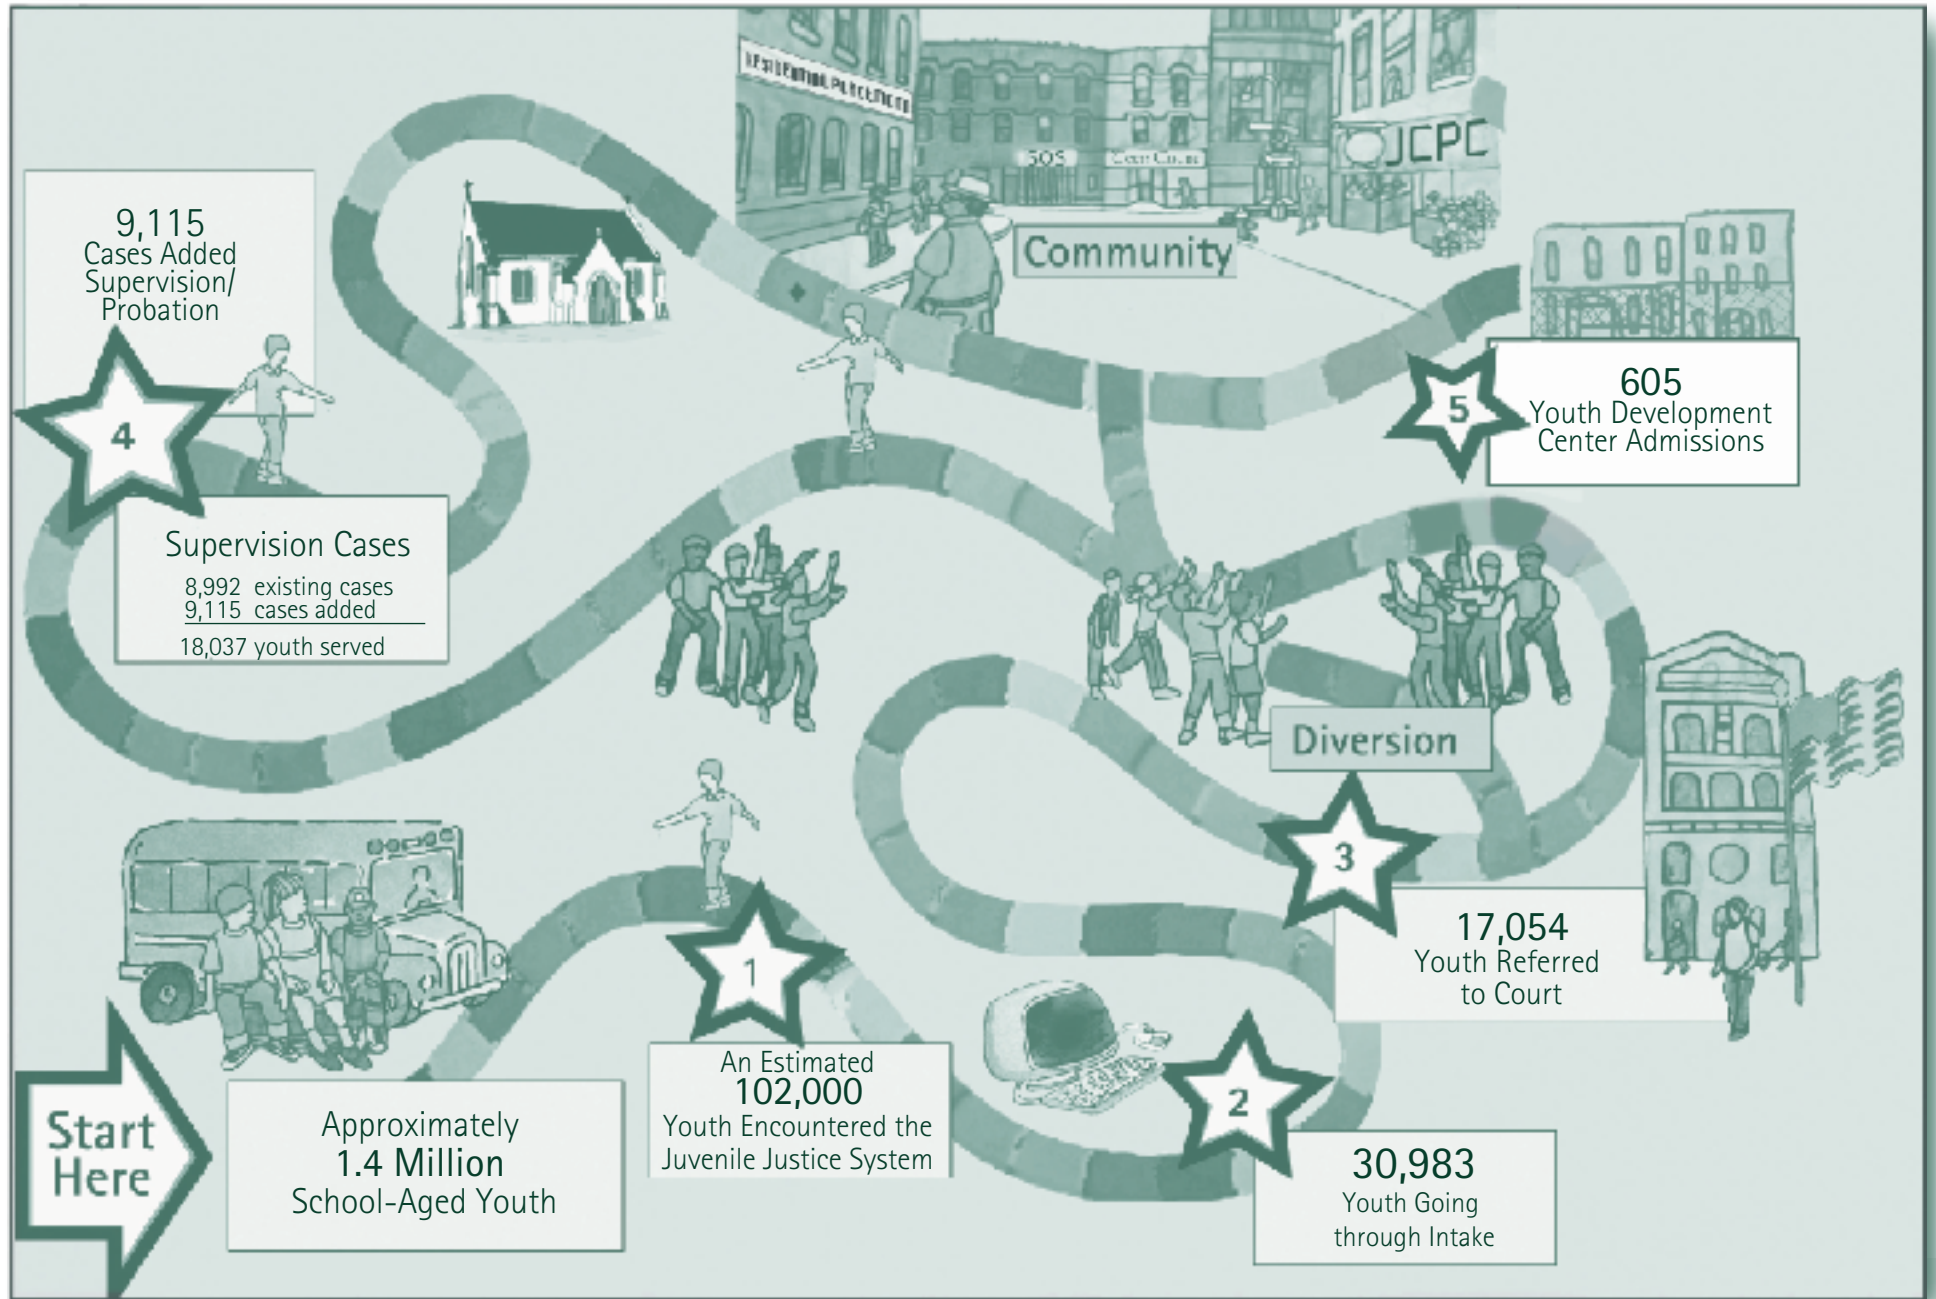

We worked to revise twenty-year-old rules, laying the groundwork for policy creation. We hired the Department's first Policy Manager to implement best practice and prevention strategies within Departmental and Division policy, aiding us in the alignment of our mission and goals with work activities.

DJJDP now has in place its Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Policy, Procedures, Plan, and Goals.

Education policies and procedures for our two assessment centers were developed, teachers and staff were trained, and special classes were developed for students enrolled in the assessment process.

We implemented all Intervention/Prevention Division, Court Services policies.

The Path of Juvenile Justice in North Carolina: 2002

The Path of Juvenile Justice in North Carolina: 2002

The Path of Juvenile Justice in North Carolina: 2002 illustrates how youth move through the juvenile justice system. About 7% of North Carolina's youth encountered the juvenile justice system. About 2.3% of these youth were provided juvenile court services with 1.3% actually referred to court. Of this 1.3%, about .7% were diverted to supervision/probation with only .5% admitted to youth development centers.

(Start) In 2002, an estimated 1.4 million youth were of school age in North Carolina and attended public, charter, or private schools. The Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention's Center for the Prevention of School Violence touched the school lives of these youth through services provided to all schools in North Carolina.

(1) Approximately 102,000 youth encountered North Carolina's juvenile justice system through interaction with Juvenile Crime Prevention Council services, other community programs (Support Our Students; teen courts; mentoring programs; multipurpose juvenile homes; Eckerd Camps; Camp Woodson), juvenile court services, or the Center for the Prevention of School Violence.

(2) 30,983 youth received intake services provided by juvenile court counselors.

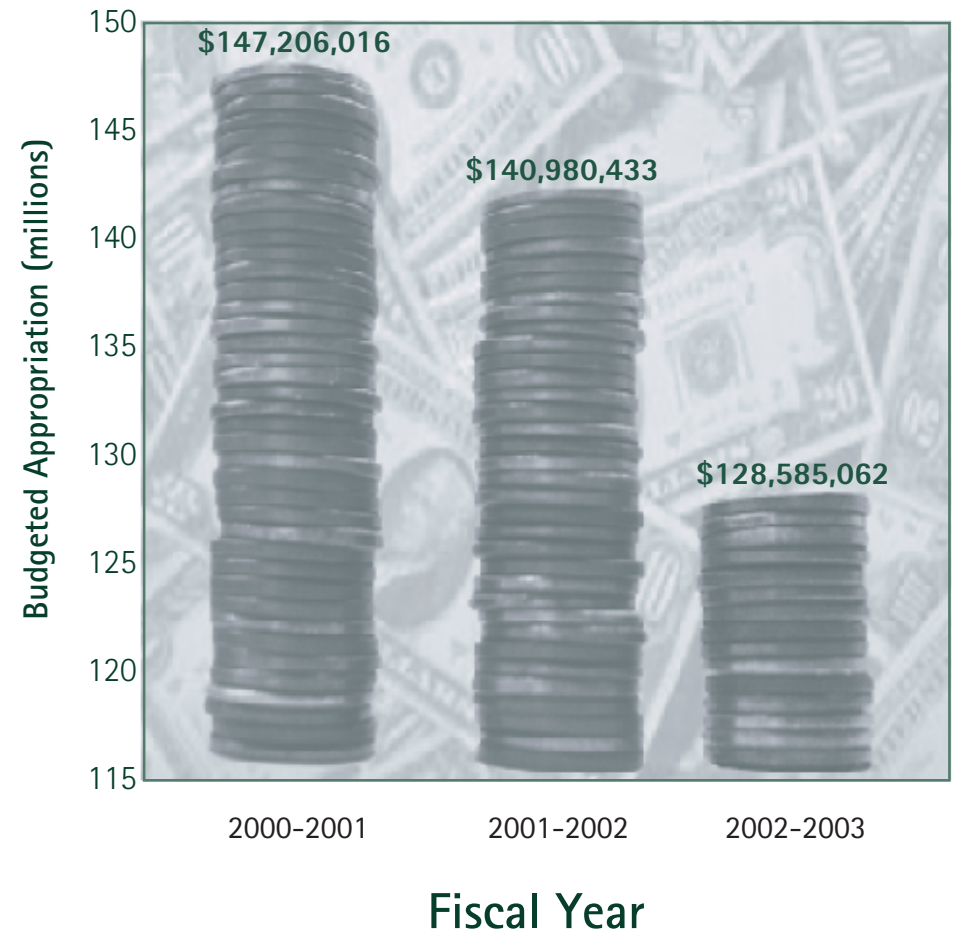

(3) 17,054 youth were referred to juvenile court.

(4) 18,037 youth were served by supervision/probation (9,115 supervision/probation cases were added in 2002 to 8,992 existing supervision/probation cases).

(5) 605 youth were admitted to youth development centers.

(Community) Most youth who travel on The Path of Juvenile Justice in North Carolina receive services in their own communities. Those who receive services outside their own communities typically return to their communities after receiving services.

DJJD State Appropriation

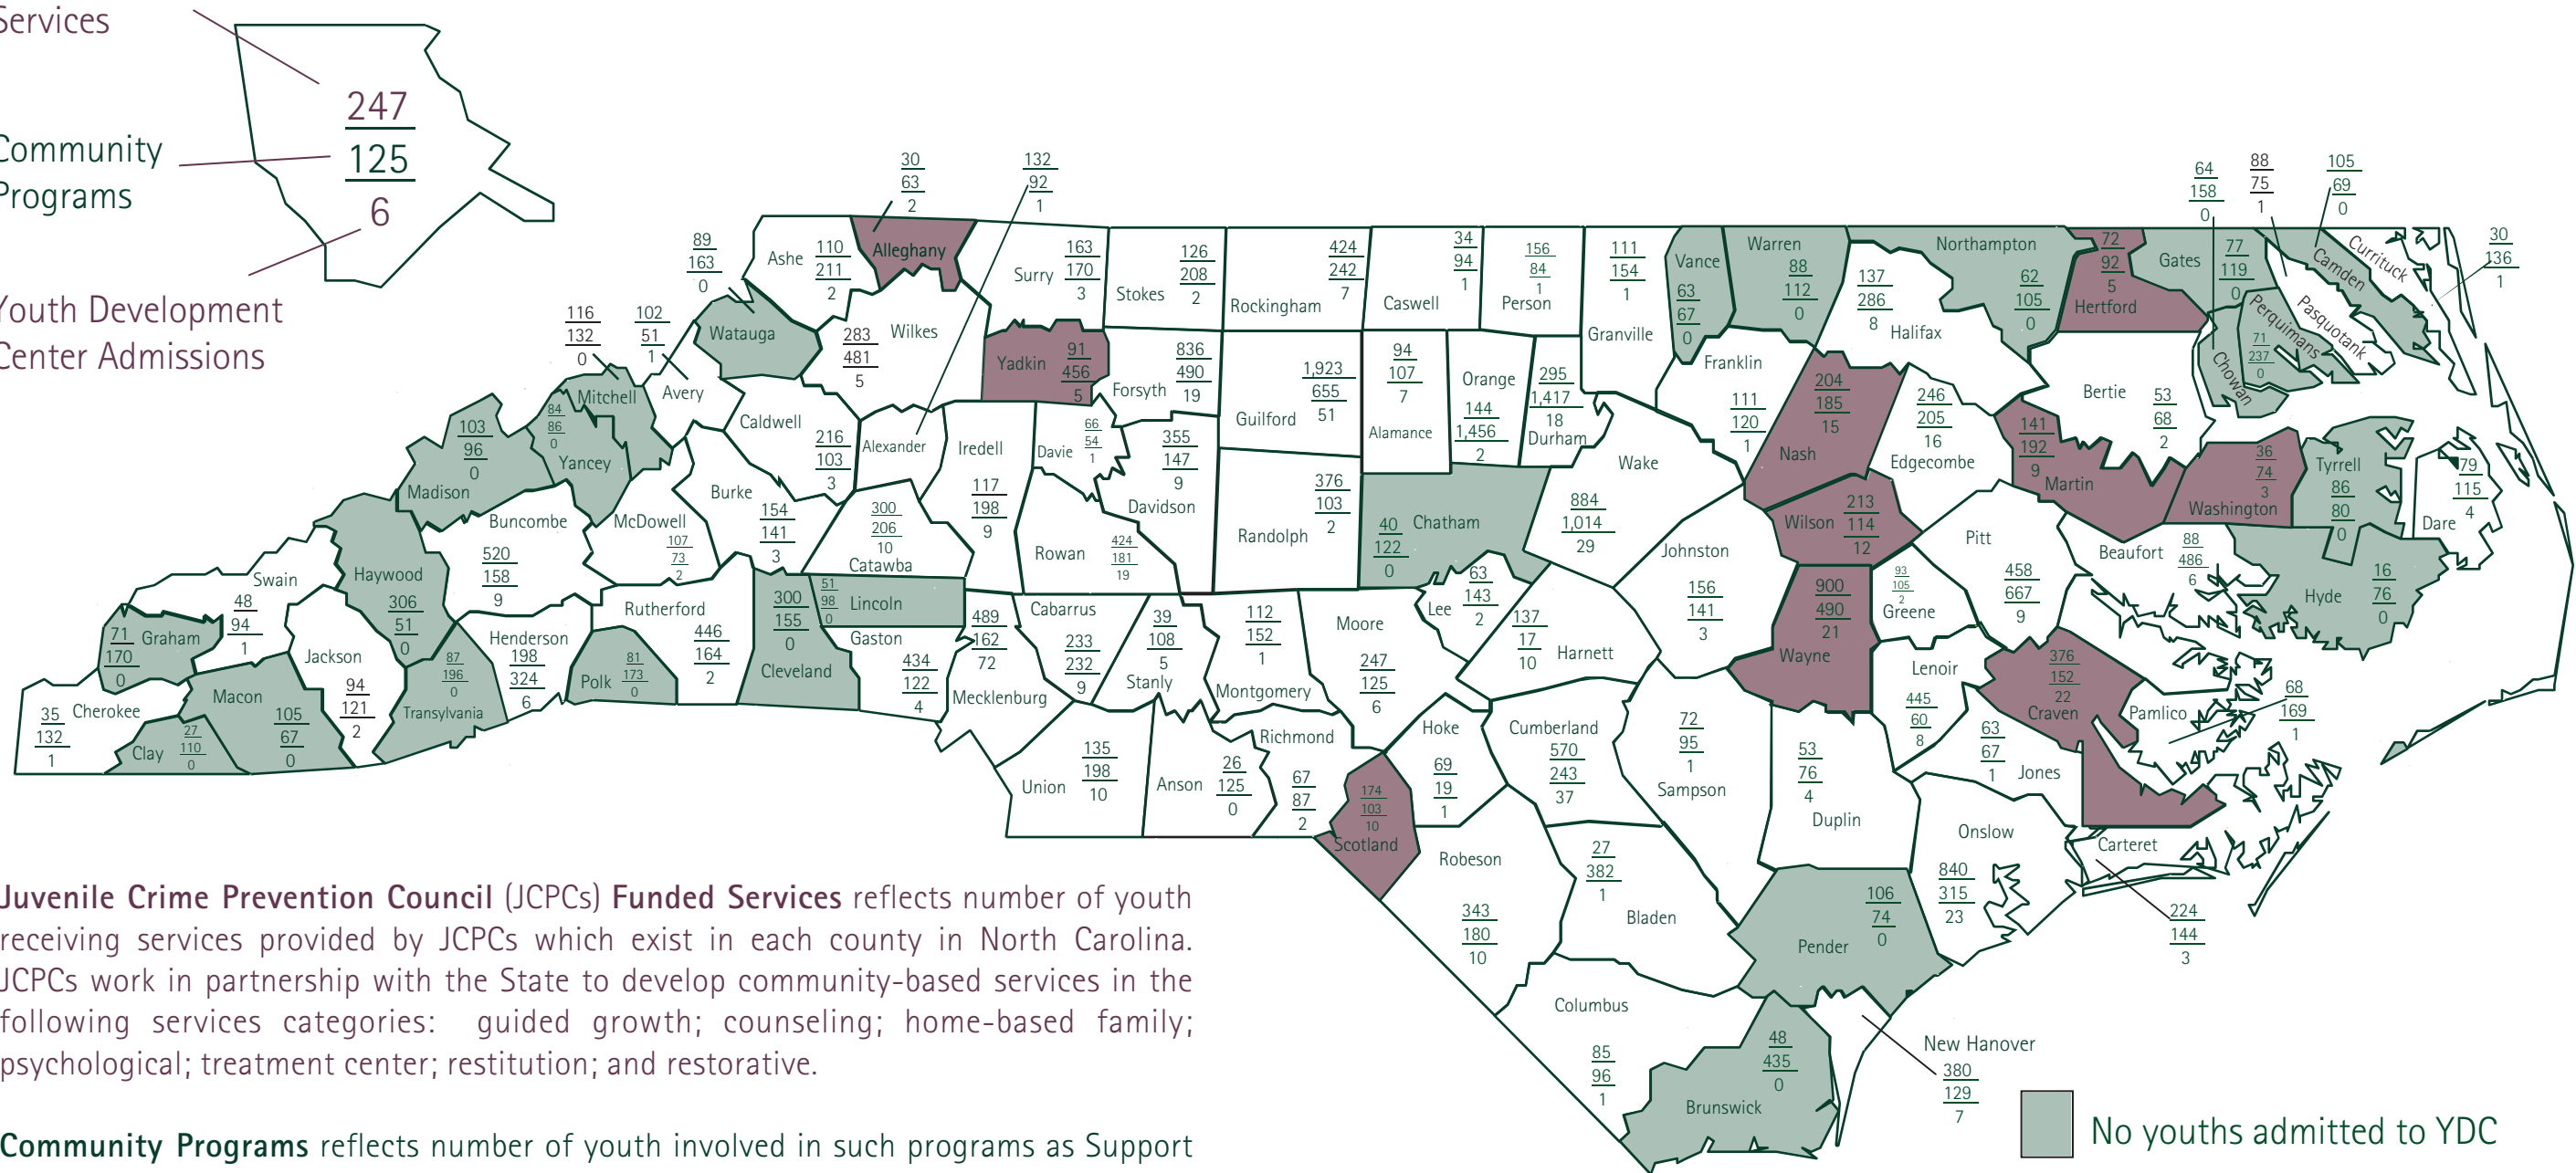

2002 Program Admissions by County

• JCPC Funded Services

• Community Programs

• Youth Development Center Admissions

Juvenile Crime Prevention Council (JCPCs) Funded Services reflects number of youth receiving services provided by JCPCs which exist in each county in North Carolina. JCPCs work in partnership with the State to develop community-based services in the following services categories: guided growth; counseling; home-based family; psychological; treatment center; restitution; and restorative.

Community Programs reflects number of youth involved in such programs as Support Our Students, teen courts, mentoring, multipurpose juvenile homes, Eckerd Camps, and Camp Woodson.

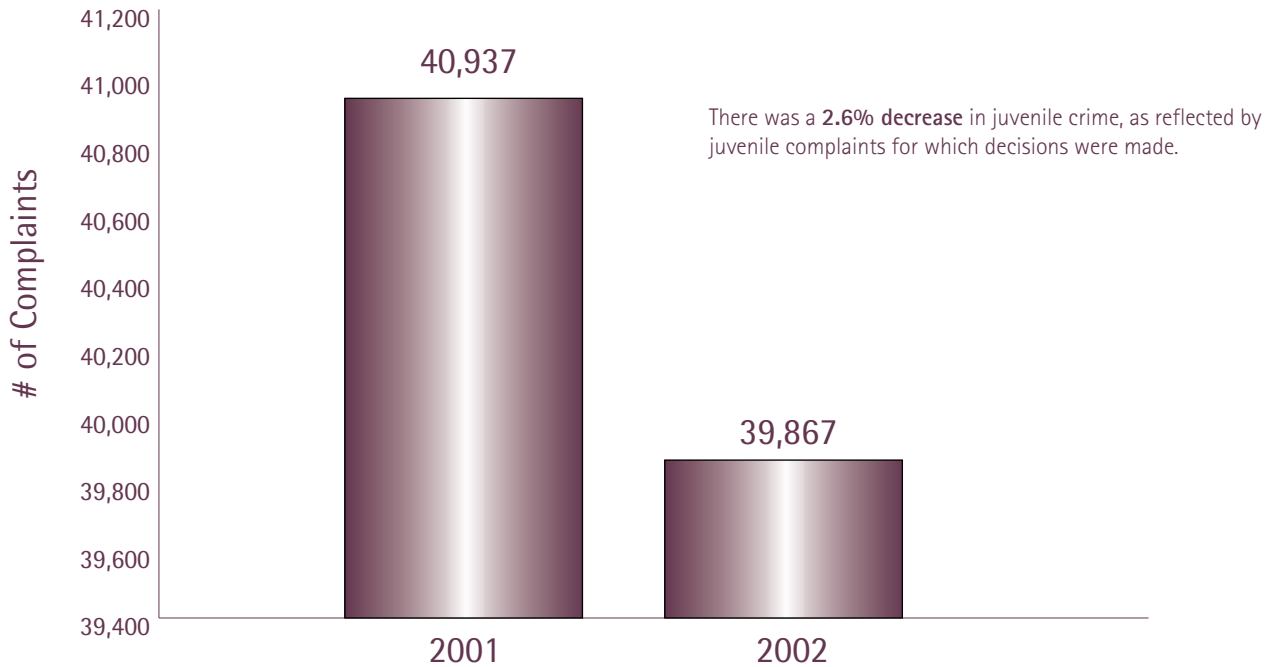

Youth Development Center Admissions reflects number of youth assigned to one of the five secure residential facilities authorized to provide long-term education, treatment, and rehabilitative services to delinquent youth committed by the court to the Department.

■ No youths admitted to YDC
 ■ More than twice the State Rate of YDC admissions

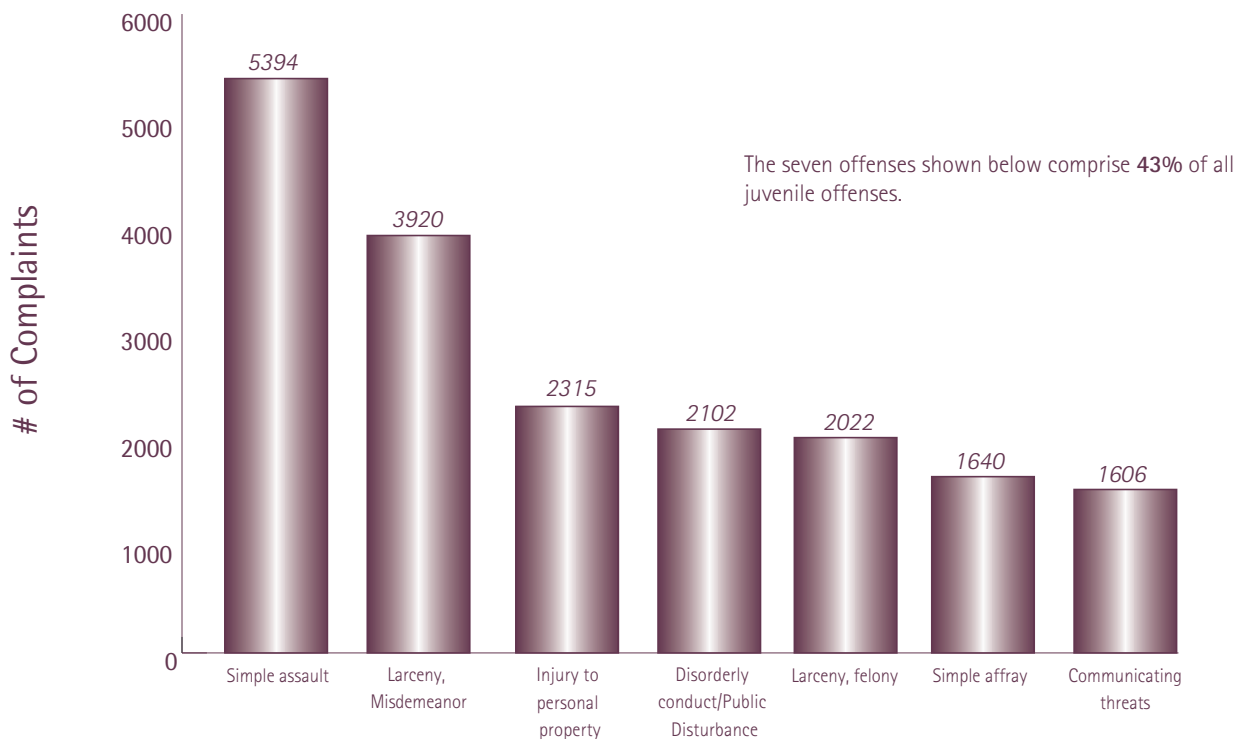

The State Rate of YDC Admissions is 5.2 per 10,000 juveniles.

Juvenile Crime: 2001 and 2002

2002 marked the first year we collected a full year of offense complaint data. Complaints are recorded as offenses that enter the juvenile court counselor's office for the first time. There is one complaint for each offense committed by a juvenile. Decision numbers are based on decisions made by court counselors on those complaints. These numbers can be higher than complaint numbers from one year to the next because a complaint may be filed toward the end of the year, but a decision may not be made on the case until the following year.

Most Common Juvenile Offenses by Type: 2002

To find statistics on your county, visit "DJJDP Statistics" at www.ncdjdp.org

Complaints Received: 2002

From January to December 2002, the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention collected data on juvenile complaints received by court counselors. The vast majority of documented offenses (97%) are classified as nonviolent, with misdemeanors constituting 70% of all juvenile offenses.

Rates calculated from the number of complaints received and each county's juvenile population per 1,000; Ages 6-15 for Delinquency Rates; Ages 6-17 for Undisciplined Rates.

The following 15 counties reported the highest number of complaints received:

- (1) Mecklenburg (3,799)
- (2) Guilford (2,403)
- (3) Wake (2,241)
- (4) Cumberland (2,042)
- (5) New Hanover (1,385)

Our Youth at at Glance

2002 marked the first full year of Risk Assessment data collection for juveniles. DJJDP staff use the new Risk Assessment tool to evaluate each juvenile's potential risk factors and their likelihood of re-offending. The data shown on pages 18 and 19 represents information attained from the 8,664 juveniles who received assessments during 2002.

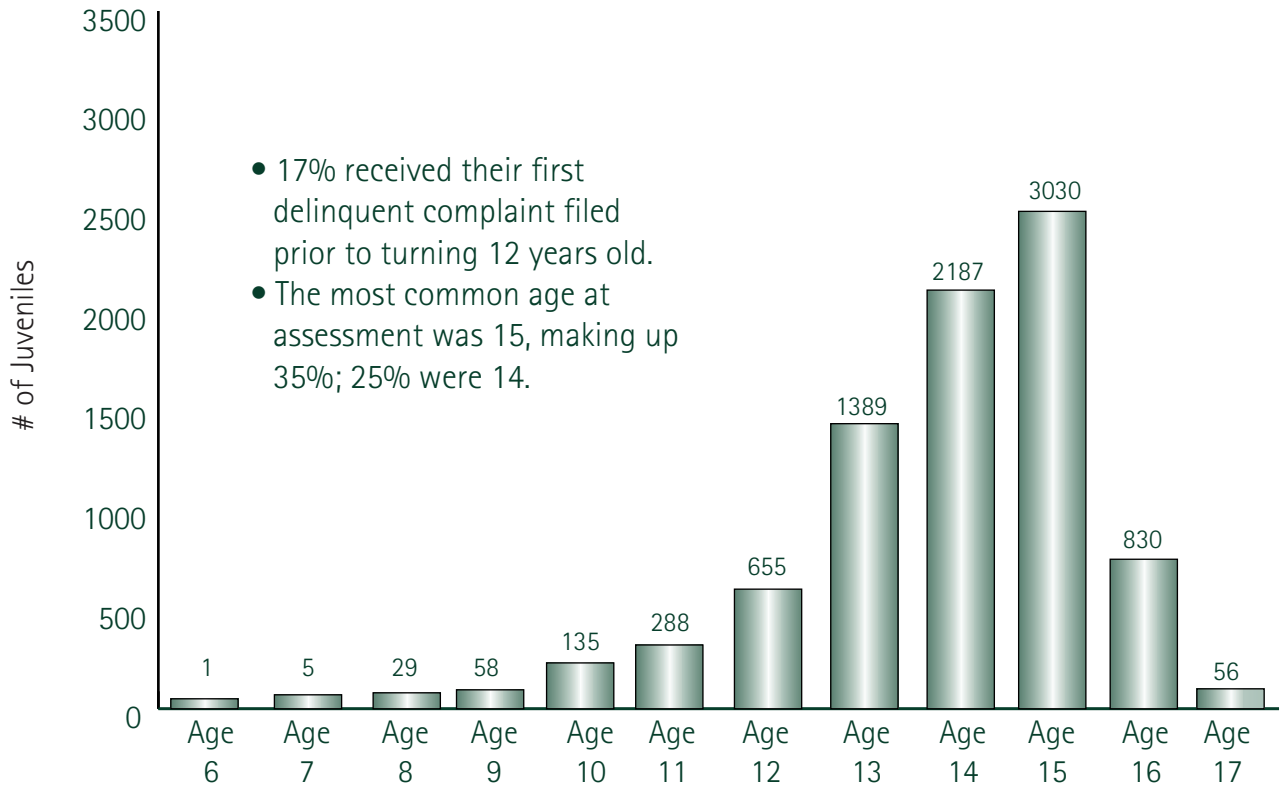

Juveniles Receiving Assessments by Gender

Assessment Facts

- 65% encountered no prior adjudication.
- 56% experienced serious problems in school.
- 40% were identified as having substance abuse issues within the previous 12 months.
- 3% reported being a "gang member" or associating with gang members.

Detention Center Admissions Since Juvenile Justice Reform

DJJDP and County Detention Center Facts

- There are 10 DJJDP-operated and 4 county-operated juvenile detention centers.
- The average daily population for 2002 was 288 youth.
- The average length of stay in 2002 was 11 days.
- There were 8,832 admissions to detention centers during 2002.
- Detention Admissions increased by 38% since 1998.
- 28% of admissions were female juveniles.
- Detention centers served 98 out-of-state runaways.
- 1,536 admissions were for fourteen 24-hour stays.
- 428 admissions were for 28-day stays.
- 1,748 admissions were for five 24-hour stays.

Youth Development Center Trends

The youth development center population decreased by 56% since 1998. While the average daily population is decreasing, the average length of stay is increasing. These trends reflect the decline of misdemeanor offender admissions, the success of community treatment programming, and juvenile justice reform. The length of stay will continue to increase as N.C. statute allows the Department to extend a juvenile's length of commitment. The decision to extend is based on the "protection of the public and the likelihood that continued placement will lead to further rehabilitation".
 -N.C. Gen. Stat. § 7B-2515.

Youth Development Center Admissions

- 47% of all students read four grade levels below their grade placement upon entrance to our centers.
- Over one third of our students are receiving special education (exceptional children) services.
- Females consisted of 13% of YDC admissions.
