North Carolina prisons continue to experience high levels of staff vacancies that create serious concerns related to the safe and secure operations of facilities. One effort to improve safety for staff and offenders is to reduce the offender population at facilities where staffing levels are not sufficient to manage offenders at facility capacity. As a result, in June 2018 Prisons began backlogging offenders sentenced to serve terms of incarceration in the state prison system in county jails. The Department of Public Safety is increasing efforts to recruit and retain staff, enhancing facility security through other means such as deployment of new equipment and technology, and modifying policies to promote operational efficiencies, all of which are aimed at improving security and reducing reliance on county jails to house the backlogged offenders. For calendar year 2018, the department incurred jail backlog costs of $1.1 million, as depicted in the table below:
