TRANSITIONAL HOUSING

WHAT IS TRANSITIONAL HOUSING?

Transitional housing provides a structured, supportive environment for adults reentering society following incarceration as well as individuals on probation, parole, or post-release supervision.

PURPOSE

This program is tailored to justice-involved individuals who lack stable housing upon release and require assistance in developing the skills necessary for self-sufficiency and stable employment. Residents participate in a range of services designed to promote successful reintegration, including employment readiness, substance abuse treatment, mental health support, and other rehabilitative services.

The program emphasizes engagement and compliance with structured requirements, offering a supportive environment where participants can work on overcoming barriers to reentry.
